The general public, outside of those directly interested in the fight, look on with intense interest, but most people are rather chary in expressing any decided views. Among the laboring classes the sentiment is universal and emphatic in favor of the strikers, and many a fervent wish is expressed that they may succeed. Among the more conservative and intelligent, even of those who depend upon their daily wages for their daily bread, the sentiment of sympathy, while still there, is now moderately expressed, and the confusion engendered by the strike is generally deplored.

THE SUMMER A SUCCESS.—This weather deserves an epic. The gods of summertime have been most propitious and gracious unto us. Between Boreas and Jupiter Pluvius our late has been delightful. While life in the city has not been intolerable, life in the country is as delicious as a draft of nectar that may be drank from forever without diminishing its flow. The robin's song has an extra gurglo, the strident tenor of the seventeen year locust is not wholly unmelodious, and the The robin's song has an extra gurgle, the strident tenor of the seventeen year locate is not wholly unmelodious, and the air is so baimy and the stars so bright, that friends awinging in the same hammock listen entranced to the sqeak of two pophar limb rubbing against each other, and mistake it for a nightengale. People who think it wicked to be happy, entice with pennies the hand-organ's bray to come and modify the perfect melody of the blue bird and oriole, or they plant alianthus trees here and there to tone down the fragrance of the roses. Cats also seem to thrive this cool month. With unusual fearlessness they make love on the peak of the contiguous roof, for the hurtling boot-jack has lost its wonted activity; the hand of the lodger is still and his shore is loud, for he "cantal the lot of the contract of the content of the cont

Since the victories won by the Rough and Realies at Farmont over the Clarksburg boys, their courage has "arisen" somewhat, and they now talk of challenging the Standards of Wheeling. A Solitary Serenader.—It is not encouraging for a young man to go screnading his girl and come home with a face like a war map, but this happened Thursday night to a person who is a clerk in a dry goods store. About 12 he prowled around to her residence, stood beneath her casement, threw his head back, opened his mouth and sang:

"I see thy face in every drawn; "I see thy face in every dream; My waking thoughts are full of thee; Thy glances like..."

At this stage of the game the old man who had gathered an arm full of missiles hurled them out of the window at him with a force like that of a catapult. When we state that the armload cons still and his snore is loud, for he "can-not bark loving to slumber," like Isaiah's sisted of an iron boot-jack, a poker, pair of tongs, two bricks, a stool, a conblind watchmen. The lawns are green. The distant hills are blue. The sunsets shell, a paper weight, a washbowl and a family Bible, our readers will understand why the young man had to be helped home by a policeman.
